HOUSE OF LORDS. WEDNESDAY, May 31.

READ a second time the bill for encouraging the growth of hemp and flax; and several infure bills. Adjourned.

HOUSE OF COMMONS.

WEDNESDAY, May 31.

DEFERRED the Committee of ways and means and the fupply to Friday.

Also deferred the confideration of the Ordnance fortifications to Friday,

Poor Laws.

The Speaker having taken the bill in his hand, immediately after the first reading of it, tead the contents of it. The preamble ran to fet forth the object, viz. to be fairsfied how far the will of the donor had been fulfilled in the application of charitable donations, throughout that part of Great Britain called England, which to effect in a manner the most probable and speedy, the clauses called on all magiltrates, clergymen, church-wardens, and high constables, to make faithful returns of all legacies left to the poor in their respective parishes, within a limited time, under pain of reprehension, and penalty in case of default, either in connivance, negligence, or any other mode that might prevent information, on the subject, with power to examine wills,

The Attorney General professed himself a friend to the bill, in the fenfe in which he first conceived it would have gone forth; but in its present state he thought it rather exceeded the primary limits of his wish, as he did not know without further consider ation, the confequences the clauses might involve.

Mr Huffey was of the same opinion, on which ac-count it should not meet his support, at least till he was well affured of the real object of it, as in its present form it feemed little less than a bill of discovery, which ought to be duly weighed, however specious and caprivating the title.

Mr Gilbert attempted to fatisfy him in the object of the bill, which merely went to the purpose stated on a former night, which he hoped was yet recent in the memory of the Hon. Gentleman, and which then feemed to fatisfy him. Humanity alone had given birth to the bill, and he hoped the fame affection would run through every stage of parliamentary investigation. It was by no means intended to di investigation. It was by no means intended to divert the stream of charity, but rather to see that it was conducted in its proper channel, and if it was not, to take care that it should. He therefore hoped that a subject so interesting would meet with every induspence, till it was printed with all its imperfections, which would enable gentlemen in a more effectual degree to judge of the principles of it, however inelegantly set forth, or unaptly combined in point of arrangement and stile. In consequence of which it was read a second time, and ordered to be printed for the perufal of the House in the holidays.
Scotch Fisheries.

The Solicitor-General presented from the members of the Scotch fishery, united under the title of the Joint Scotch Company, a petition, requesting to be incorporated under a charter, for the purpose of applying a certain fum towards the erection of villages, in order to collect the feattered fishermen of the western coasts of Scotland into aggregate bodies, to prevent emigration, to excite industry, to promote civilization, &c.

Sir Matthew W. Ridley hoped that the capital expected to be fixed by Parliament, would not be held out as a lure to enlarge the credit of the Company. The Master of the Rolls infifted, that as the fum would be known, if it was even the intention of the Company, fuch a proceeding could not take place, as none need trust beyond what they knew could be paid; but that he was fensible fuch proceedings would not take place.

Sir M. Ridley only observed, that last year the Company had exceeded their limitation, and that what took place at one time, in all probability might take place again.

Sir Grey Cooper made a few remarks to the fame effect. The petition was received. IMPEACHMENT OF MR HASTINGS.

The Chancellor of the Exchequer wished to know the extent of Mr Burke's charge against Mr Haflings on the morrow, which

Mr Burke indulged him in; it was of fome length, and turned entirely on the conduct of Mr Hailings in aiding and abetting Sujah Dowla in carrying on the Robilla war, to the extermination almost of that inoffensive people, who had in vain made every concession that might awaken humanity, and which war Mr Haftings was ordered by no means to interfere in by the East India Company. Having gone through the whole, in which the inexorable cruelty of Sujah Dowla was exhibited, he faid he firmly trusted that every article he had adduced would be confirmed from fact only, as he despifed infinuation, and the little arts of taking by furprife and procrastination.

LOTTERY BUSINESS.

On the propolition for railing 688,750 l. by lot-tery, viz. 50,000 tickets, at 13 l. 15 s. each, Mr. Huser reproduced the whole in very pointed terms, immediately subjoining the mischiefs that such institutions give birth to in morality, business, &c. &c. The motion passed.
OCCASIONAL VOTERS BILL.

On the order of the day being read, for receiving the report on the occasional voters bill,

Mr Fox stated to the House several reasons why the bill, in its prefent form, would not answer the the bills in its present form, would not answer the defired purpose, and particularly described how the Durham act and the Treating act would be affected by it; which brought on a flight conversation between Mr Nichols and the Attorney-General; after which the bill was ordered to be engrofied.

The House in a Committee, Mr Gilbert in the chair, went through the different clauses. Upon many of them long conversations took place; and not a few were firongly opposed, though they afterwards passed without a division. Such were the clauses by which it is to be enacted that the feller of wines shall at night set down in a book the amount of wine fold by him in the day; and by which a penalty of (00 l. is to be levied upon every one who fails to comply with this regulation. It was contended, that it was not practicable to fet down the amount every night; it often happened that feveral companies fat up all night, and were constantly calling for wine; some might order a dozen bottles at once, and perhaps towards morning leave one or two unopened: In that case, the landlord could not set down at night the amount fold, because he did not know how much would be returned. To this it was faid, that it was a very eafy matter for a man to let down what wine he delivered to his company, and afterwards mark it in the next day's account how much of it was returned. As to the penalty, it was opposed, because it was thought, in the first place, that it would be found absolutely impossible for all fuch landlords as did not know how to write to obey the law, and confequently the levying of a penalty on them would be unjust; and even if they could write, the penalty was too great, as in many cases it would be infinitely more than feveral small alehouse-keepers were worth, who fold a little wine by

It was urged, that the bill was of a very oppreffive nature, as it would extend the Excise laws to eight thousand persons who were not at this moment

Subject to them.

Mr Pitt said this was a mistake; for though by a lift delivered in at the table, it appeared that 8000 persons had taken out licenses, or would be obliged by the present bill so to do, there were 7300 of them, who by having ale or spirit licenses, were at this moment liable to the visits of Excisemen; so that the extension of the Excise laws would, in fact, reach no more than 700 persons, who were not already subject to them; and this would not be thought a very great number, when it was confidered that above 140,000 persons of different trades, were, at this instant, under the Excise laws of the

Mr Sheridan, Lord Beauchamp, Mr Huffey, and feveral others, reprehended and condemned the fpi-rit of this bill in very forcible language—the blanks were filled up, ordered to be reported, and to be reprinted and recommitted, should the House think necessary. Adjourned.

FROM THE LONDON PAPERS, June 1. Utrecht, May 23. The province has delivered a very extraordinary resolution to the Assembly of the States-General, the substance of which is as follows, viz. "That the States of the province are always ready to fulfil the duties impofed upon them by the rest of the Confederates, as long as they reciprocally enjoy the rights and advan-tages (tipulated by the Union, which ferves as the basis of the constitution; but that the principles of that Union having been hurt by the resolutions of the Assembly of the Generality, dated the 17th of Fe-bruary and the 1st of May last, relative to the direction of the India Company, they (the States of Zealand) think they have a right to enforce the just complaints which they made fome time ago on that fubject, and in confequence they have thought proper provisionally to limit to the 9th of September next their confent to the expences brought to their charge by the war department of the year 1786; and they hope, that before the expiration of that time, their grievances will be redressed; and if not, they shall most likely be obliged to take other efficacious measures, and do justice to themselves."

There is no doubt but the strong expressions of the above refolution have given rife to the report, that the province of Zealand absolutely intended to offer the fovereignty to his Serene Highness the Prince Stadtholder, authorifed fo to do by the example of the States of Guelderland, who made a nilar offer to William III. The journey of the Stadtholder to that province confirms many people in the above ideas; but if the confequences of fuch a step are maturely weighed, it will appear to be to-tally against the interests both of the Province and the Prince to bring about any fuch Revolution.

L O N D O N, June 1. HANDEL'S COMMEMORATION.

The Grand Musical Festivity commenced yester-day at Westminster Abbey with a miscellaneous selection of fome of the best works of Handel. By ten o'clock the aifle and galleries were filled with a company the most numerous and elegant that ever were assembled on a similar occasion, which, with the presence of the Royal Family, and their attendants, and an Orchestra, consisting of near seven hundred musicians, formed a coup d'oeil, the effect of which it is impossible to describe. Their Majesties with their fuite, which was splendid and numerous, the Princesses, with the young Princes, and their attendants, entered the gallery prepared ception about a quarter past twelve. On their entrance they were faluted with the grand and majestic Overture in Efther, which was followed by that Sublime composition, The Detiingen Te Deum. those who have never heard this grand composition, it is vain to attempt a description of its effect on the passions. It was composed for the celebration of a military triumph, and in it Handel has displayed all the vigour and fire of his genius. It abounds with the most beautiful contrast. The drums and trumpets are finely relieved by the other instruments, and the concluding chorus winds up the whole with a majefty and force that communicates enthulialin to every bosom.

The fecond at was introduced by the fourth oboe concerto of Handel, which is one of his most pleasing and masterly productions for instruments, and here Parke distinguished limited in the following parts, which he executed with brilliancy and expre-fion. The anthems and choruses were performed with amazing correctness, and with most admirable propriety. The solo fingers vied with each other, propriety. The folo fingers vied with each other, and feemed by their exertions to contend for the palm of excellence—Madam Mara, Mrs Billington, Rubinelli, Mr Harrison, and Corfe, displayed their winderful powers. Rubinelli, in particular, fung that beautiful and affecting air, " I know that my Ledeemer liveth," with infinite skill and taste. The ther fingers acquitted themselves extremely well; but we should be wanting in our acknowledgments of rising merit, if we passed in silence the expressive manner with which Miss Mahon sung the pleasing air which was alloted to her. Her cadence was universally admired for its elegant simplicity and changes of the case racteristic expression. The performance concluded with the Anthem, " My heart is inditing," which was composed for the coronation of the late King, and it is perhaps one of the most energetic and ner-

We cannot conclude without paying that tribute of commendation, which all must acknowledge is due to the merits and exertions of Mr Bates, who prefided at the organ, and who conducted the band with the greatest precision and ability. He was ably feconded by Mr Cramer, who led with his usual fire and animation, and with that unremitted attention to the performance which distinguishes him as a leader beyond all his cotemporaries.

The ladies, who attended the Commemoration of Handel yesterday, were dressed as plain as possible; all without hats, and many without caps. Some of them, to obtain good places, were in the Abbey at half past eight in the morning.

At the further end of the south gallery, a very fingular character appeared. He wore a red night-cap, neatly turned up with white: He was a very good looking man, and feemed to be about 50 years of age.

The confusion of carriages yesterday at the Abbey was fo great, that it was near five o'clock be-fore the last left Palace-yard. Several pannels were poled at the corner of Parliament and George streets, where the great contest lay: and there by the mad-ness of the coachmen in pushing for the point of pre-miership, much mischief was done, and a considerable delay occasioned, to the great joy of the mob, who gazed on an immense number of fine women for a long time. Many ladies were obliged to foot it, and take shelter in such shops as were open; and the pawn-broker at the corner of George street had in consequence some of the handsomest articles in his shop, that he ever yet had an opportunity of ex-poling to view. Yesterday Mr Jervoise Clarke reported from the Carlisle election Committee,

" That Mr Lowther was not duly elected." " That Mr Christian was duly elected, and ought to have been returned."

The SPEECH of the SPEAKER of the House of Commons, on Friday May 26, 1786, upon presenting to his Majesty the bill for vesting certain fums in Commissioners, at the end of cvery quarter of a year, to be by them applied to the reduction of the national debt, which then received the royal affent.

Most gracious Sovereign,
"Your faithful Commons have passed a bill, entitled, An Att for westing certain sums in Commisfioners, at the end of every quarter of a year, to be by them applied to the reduction of the national debt; by which they have manifelted their attention to your Majesty's recommendation, at the opening of this fession, for establishing a fixed plan for the re-duction of the national debt.

" By the unanimity which attended the last and most important stage of this bill, they have given the most decifive proof, that they have but one heart, and one voice, in the maintenance of the public cre-dit, and profperity of their country.

"The public credit of the nation, which is the refult of just and honourable dealing, is now guarded by an additional fecurity—and the future profeerity of this country will effectually be provided for. when it is considered, that for the purpose of pleading the cause of the continuance of this measure most powerfully with posterity, your faithful Com-mons have, to the justice and good posticy of it, added the authority of their own example :

Qui facit, ille jubet. thens imposed during the last ten years from sub-mitting, in the present time, and in the hour of peace, to new, and the pollibility of other burthens : their object being to attain a fituation for their country more favourable to her defence and glory in the event of future emergencies.

"A plan fo honourable in its principle, and fo conducive to the future happiness and fasety of the kingdom, must be, in the highest degree, receptable to the father of his people.

" Under that confidence, in the name of all the Commons of Great Britain, I tender this bill to your Majesty; to which, with all humility, your faithful Commons defire your Majesty's Royal affent.'

The earliest lottery that is recollected was in 1560 confilling of 40,000 lots, at ten shillings each lot. The prizes were plate, and the profits applied to repair the havens of the kingdom. It was drawn at the west door of St Paul's cathedral ; and the drawing, which began Jan 11. continued inceffantly day and night, till May 6. There were then only three lottery-offices in London.

" The cry of the House was then for Mr Burke, who rofe, and faid, that in all great causes, like that in which he stood engaged, it was very natural to allow a little time to arrange matters. He therements, while he prepared himself. There was, in confequence, a profound filence for the space of ten minutes, when Mr Burke resumed his discourse, by apologifing for a further indulgence. It was the greatest cause, he said, that had ever been before Parliament, and he felt himself in a rather aukward rationent, and he felt himself in a rather auxward fluation; the expectations of the public, and the expectations of the House; having so long been raised to the highest pitch. It was a great cause; he again said, that he stood engaged in in it was no less than Great Britain against all Asia. The time was arrived, when the House and the world at large were to determine between the accuser and the acoufed. The fword of justice was now drawn; and it behoved Parliament to restore peace and tranquilthe British government. He thought it became Parliament to take the business out of his hands, as he of himself was nothing, and altogether unequal to the task; neither could he have so long supported himfelf as the accuser, unless the cause had supported him; but the facts he had laid before the House, were incontrovertible. Mr Hastings's answers to the charges, admitted them all, except in two particular inftances. The question was, therefore, not whether the charges against him were well found ed, or not; but, whether the charges were criminal or not. He faid, it well became the House to consider naturely what they were about, as they were not merely to condemn or acquit Warren Hastings; but, by their judgment, it was to be determined what was to be the future conduct of our governors in India, as every man in that part of the world had his eye refult of the business before the House, and would act accordingly. Much, he faid, had been thrown out as to what could be his motive for bringing the acculations he had brought forward. wer to this, he would take the opportunity of observing, that there were three passious that often inquenced the actions of men. 11t, The passion of inorance; adly, The passion of inadvertency, and,

3dly, the passion of anger. He said, if he was actuated by the swit, it must be ignorance derived from the knowledge of wisdom. It could not be inadvertency; for he had spared no pains in the business, in his refearches after the truth : and, if it had been the passion of anger, it was a passion prompted wholly by a love of justice. It was true, that for the space of fourteen years, there had been no com-plaint from India against Mr Hallings; but, he would venture to fay, that this was a circumstance that created me h sufficion, because it was hardly possible for a man to govern fuch an extent of country as Mr Haftings had, for fo long a fpace, with-out furnishing some cause of complaint; and there-fore it looked as if the channel had been entirely stopped up. He drew a comparison between different states, and described how the Roman empire had been governed, stating, that the higher the cri-minal, the severer he was punished. He thought the whole transactions of India ought to have been recorded, and faid, that he should trouble the House with a recapitulation of the various charges he had exhibited against Mr Hastings, and his comments upon them. One charge, he faid, was a very ferious one, indeed, that was, receiving bribes of the different Nabobs, and might deferve a priority of consideration; but he should first read to them a motion on the Rhohilla war. Mr Burke was pro-ceeding at great length; and it was supposed that he would be on his legs for several hours.

"The House and gallery were equally crowded; and a very late debate was expected."

Yesterday, being the anniversary of his Majesty's birth-day, when he entered into the 49th year his age, in the morning, the flag from the Cattle was displayed; at noon, the great guns were fired, which was returned by the 58th regiment drawn up on the Castle-hill; and several rounds of the battery at Leith were also fired.

This day, on account of yesterday being Sunday, his Majesty's birth-day was observed here with the utmost demonstrations of joy. At noon, the music-bells were set a-ringing. In the afternoon, the Lord Provost, Magistrates and Council, attended by a number of Noblemen and Gentlemen of distinction, with the Officers of the Army, and the Trained Bands, affembled in the Parliament House, where they drank his Majesty's health, with a variety of other loyal toasts, under repeated flourishes of trumpers, and vollies of final arms from the City-Guard, drawn up in the Parliament-close. After which the great bells will be fet a ringing, and the evening conclude with a brilliant affembly.

This day, being the anniverfary observed in memory of George Heriot, founder of the Hospital of that name, the Rev. The weather, for fome days past, has been remar-

Some months ago, the road from Edinburgh to Leith towards the bottom, along fide of the walk, was carefully raked, and the rakings heaped up in piles, with a view no doubt, of being carried off after dry. This, however, is not yet done, for what reafon is not faid. But furely, narrowing the road wantonly by that means above eight feet, which it cannot spare, never could be meant. It is hoped those who have the charge of this road, will remedy this grievance without delay.

Saturday night, one Archibald Collins, a journeyman wright, reliding in St Mary's Wynd, cut his wife's throat in a most shocking mander with a razor. It would appear the poor woman had strug-gled much; for some of her singers are almost cur off by seizing the blade of the razor. One of her cheeks is likewise shockingly mangled. She was immediately dressed by a surgeon, and sent to the Royal Instrumery. The windpipe has fortunately escaped. But it is very much seared the woman will not furvive the great lofs of blood the has fuftained. Collins is committed to the tolbooth by warrant of the Magiltrates. This couple were married fo lately as the end of February laft, and jealoufy is affigued by some people as the cause of this barbarous action. On Friday lait, a most alarming fire broke out in the house and shop of Mr Robert Bain cabinet-maker in Stirling, which did very confiderable damage; and had it not been for the activity of the Provolt and Magistrates, and Major Joass, Castle engine on the first alarm, the whole would have been destroyed. Happily the premisses were infured in the Sun Fire Office. —At this term, when there are fo many new houses in this city posfessed, and removals of furniture, not only such perfons as with to cover their property against fire anew, but those also who remove from one house to another, ought to be particularly attentive to their infurance; for unless notice is previously lodged at the infurance-offices, no claims for damage can be made effectual, as the nature of the risk may have been changed by fuch removal.

On Wednesday the 24th ulta being the day on which the Countels of Sutherland came of age, a number of her Ladyship's friends met at Dornoch to celebrate the joyful occasion. Beef, bread, whife ship's tenants, in that and the neighbouring parishes and all ranks seemed to vie with each other in testifying their joy on the occasion, and their high respect for so amiable a character.

In a country which cannot raile the necessary Supplies of grain for its inhabitants, who frequently experience a temporary scarcity, it would be expedient to accommodate each house, having four aparements, with an acre of land adjoining to the fame, and the finall houses with half an acre each, whereon to raile vegetables and potatoes; which, with fish at their doors, would form a principal part of their subsistence through the whole year.

In treating with the respective proprietors of the foil, it would be necessary to look forward to the growth of the towns, and procute at once fufficient ground, not only for the fite of houses, but also for a small garden to each house, that shall be erect-ed by individuals, during the infancy of each town-

The progress of these towns will depend greatly on the liberality of the present ground proprie-tors; who, if they co-operate with the good dispo-fitions of Covetunient and the public, if they wish to improve their estrates, to have their rents well paid, and to see their country flourish, will readily treat with the Directors for a piece of ground, not under fifty Seatch acres for each township, to become from thence forward the unallenable foyalty of fuch towns, subject only to the Prince on the throne, the laws of their country, and the regulations of their own magitracy.

"The growth of these towns will also depend much on the aid that Government shall give towards the building of cultomhouses, quays, and other works, which sail properly on the public at large, The concurrence of Government is this respect will operate as the main spring of the whole business. LEITH ASSEMBLY ROOMS.

CEORGE GIBB, at the Coffeehouse, Leith, returns his most sincere thanks to the Nobility and Gentry, the Public in general, and the inhabitants of Leith in particular most tincere thanks to the Nobility and Gestry, the Public in general, and the inhabitants of Leith in particular, for the many favours conferred upon him during a period of three years, and begs leave to acquaint them, That he has now opened, as an INN, that large, commodious, and newly creded building, known by the name of THE LEITH ASSEMBLY ROOMS, which he has prepared at a confiderable expence, and with very elegant furniture, in such a manner as he hopes will insure the countenance of the Public.

Besides many large, handsome parlours and bed chambers, there is a Spacious Hall appropriated to Dancing and Festivals, and a Cosse room acknowledged to be in higher taste than any in the neighbourhood, with a beautiful view of the seat of his Grace the Durke of Bbecleugh); and, its being detached from the Tavern, (the reverse of which has been often complained of) must be particularly agreeable to the guests, there being a very easy communication, without disturbing any company. The cellars are large, and calculated to preferre liquors of every kind in perfection at all seasons.

The local vustion of the LEITH ASSEMBLY ROOMS has long been admired, being equally centrical to the town, the country, and the airing ground upon the Sands, as well as on the great road from Ediaburgh to the Races.

Grateful for past favours, and determined to spare no expence in order to secure the continuence of them, Gronge Gras respectiving them, that every exertion shall be made to procure their approbation, many marks of which he has already experienced.

JUDICIAL SALE OF DURN,

By Adjournment—And the Price farther reduced.

To be Sold by public roup, under authority of the Court of Seffion, within the Parliament-house, Edinburgh, upon Friday the 23d day of June 1786, between the hours forward for afterness of the sold for a forecast. of four and fix afternoon,
All and Whole the Lands, Barony, and Effate of DURN,

All and Whole the Lands, Barony, and Effect of DURN, with the Teinds and Mill of the fame, lying in the parish of Fordyce and shire of Banss; the proven free rent whereof, exclusive of the cefs, which is paid by the tenants, is 711 l. 6s. 4d. 3-12ths; and the upset price, which originally was 19,467 l. 10s. 6d. and was afterwards reduced to 18,000 l. now to be 17,000 l. Sterling.

The valued rent is 9521 Scots; and those parts of the lands held of the Crown entitle the proprietor to a freehold qualification in the county.

The estate is reckoned to contain about 1600 Scors acres,

The eftate is reckoned to contain about 1000 Scots acres, exclusive of a share in an undivided common and moss. It is situated within a quarter of a mile of that populous shourithing sea-port town, called Portsoy, sive miles from Banss, and three from Cullen, through all which the great posteriod leads, and in that district of the shire called the Boyns, remarkable for its excellent foil and climate; fertile in all kinds of grain, and of late much distinguished for sive for improvement.—The effate is well tenanted, most of fpirit of improvement.—The effate is well tenanted, most of the leases nearly expired; and, upon a renewal, it is expect-ed will yield more than double the present rent.—The lands abound with lime-stone, marble, and whin-stone and on the hill of Durn there are great quantities of white ftone, fit for potteries, for which advantageous offers have been made. The lands are also well accommodated with the means of improvement, as the barony has a fervitude on the inexhaudible moffes of Park, and, from their vicinity to wainexhaultible mosses of Park, and, from their vicinity to water-carriage, coal, and every other necessary, are easily procured. The Gardens of Durn are very extensive, and well stocked with fruit-trees of the hest kinds; a considerable part of the estate contiguous to the house is inclosed and subdivided with whin and thorn hedges, with belts of thriving young plantations, which renders the parks remarkably warm and well sheltered. There is likewise a good deal of old planting about the house, on which no value is put.

A new house may be set down at a little distance from the old one, on a more elevated and most eligible spot, in the middle of a rich loamy field of forty acres, well supplied with spring and running water, and diversified with most delightful and extensive prospects of the Moray Frith and adjacent
